¶2. Post heard from General Amiri of the Afghan National Police, who clarified earlier reports of an alleged ban on all weapons in Kabul. The General said the order only applied to carrying weapons at the polling sites, and did not apply to protective details for international observers. Post has received no reports of any observers being barred from entry to polling sites for having armed escorts, or for any other reason. The European Union observer mission's 86-member team has reported no abnormalities at any of the sites it is currently observing.

Provincial reports by region follow:

Regional Command (RC) - North: No update from sitrep three.

19. AFGHAN MEDIA HIGHLIGHTS:

VOA reported on comments by the State Department spokesman in which he said that the Taliban campaign to disrupt Afghan elections will fail.

RTA and Ariana TV reported on an announcement by the MOI that carrying of weapons in Kabul would be banned on Election Day. According to the report, anyone caught carrying a weapon will be arrested, their weapons confiscated and their license revoked; only security personnel and institutions would be excepted. VOA reported that a poll by The Washington Post shows that most Americans think that war in Afghanistan is not worth fighting.

Tolo TV reported that UNAMA expressed concern over mounting problems with the 20 August elections in Afghanistan. The UN special envoy to Afghanistan also reportedly expressed concern over lack of security and fears of limited participation in the elections by women.

Many media outlets reported that U.S. Senator John McCain, on a visit to Afghanistan, said the United States and the international community will be successful in the war on terror in Afghanistan, and the Taliban will lose. He reportedly said the U.S. does not support any particular presidential candidate in the 20 August elections, and called for an upsurge in Afghan security forces.

Radio Arman reported that U.S. President Barack Obama recently stressed the importance of security for the Afghan elections, saying that U.S. forces will try to ensure security at the polling stations so that people can vote. The U.S. says the elections should be legitimate and they will cooperate with the new Afghan president.

Numerous Afghan media outlets reported that militants attacked a vehicle carrying election officials and electoral materials to a polling station in the eastern province of Nuristan on Wednesday, injuring three workers and setting afire the materials. The Deputy Police Chief of Nuristan, Colonel Mohammad Farooq Badr, said the militants intercepted the vehicle in the Mandol district. Governor Jamaluddin Badr said the workers did not inform police prior to transferring the materials. He added the wounded officials have been shifted to a facility of the Provincial Reconstruction Team. IEC provincial chief Omar Sami confirmed the incident, and warned that if the security personnel do not shift electoral materials immediately to the district, people will be deprived of their right to vote. No one has so far claimed responsibility for the attack. Another report says that an overnight rocket attack by insurgents killed a worker of Afghanistan Independent Election Commission (AIEC) and wounded another in Jawzjan province. Regional IEC head, Amanullah Habibi has confirmed the incident.

Pajhwok Afghan News Agency reported that 10 people were arrested on Wednesday on charges of distributing night letters in Paktia province. Police Chief Brigadier General Aziz Ahmad Wardak said four people were arrested in Ahmadabad district and six others were arrested in Gardez, where they were spreading the night letters, which said "the election is an American project and people should not participate in it, otherwise they will be targeted by the Taliban." Wardak said some explosives were also seized from the detainees. Meanwhile, Taliban attacked a border police check-post from across the border in Patan district. A police official, Mirza Gull Abakhel, said that two policemen were seriously injured in the 90-minute clash, and one later died in a hospital in Samkani district.

Tolo TV showed a new video clip in which Gulbudin Hikmatyar, the leader of Hizb-e Islami, sets conditions for bringing an end to the war in Afghanistan: the unconditional withdrawal of international troops; establishment of a provisional government; holding of free and transparent elections.

Radio Salam Watandar reported that an IED hit a vehicle in Maqor district of Badghis province, killing 13 civilians and wounding six others, including women and children. Provincial spokesperson Abdul Ghani Saber confirmed the incident; no one has claimed responsibility.

Afghan media outlets reported five family members were killed when a roadside bomb struck their vehicle in the Sra Kala area of Sharana, the capital of Paktika province. According to the reports the family was taking a pregnant woman to the Civil Hospital of Sharana to give birth.

An editorial published by Pajhwok News Agency summarized security and human rights concerns, concerns, the recent candidate withdrawals, and UN Special Representative Kai Eide's and Secretary of State Hillary Clinton's statements on the Afghan Elections.
